5 THINGS TO KNOW

WELCOME TO METRO PHILLY

JOVAN ALFORD, SPORTS EDITOR

The Philadelphia Flyers begin their 2018-19 campaign toward a Stanley Cup tonight out west against the defending Western Conference champion Las Vegas Knights. The Flyers did not make many changes in the offseason but did bring back forward James van Riemsdyk. Philly is hoping JVR can help in the scoring department as they racked up 247 goals in 2017, good for 12th in the NHL. What else can we expect from the Flyers this season? For more on the team, please see page 22 and check out Metro.us.

DRIVE-BY SHOOTING LEAVES FIVE WOUNDED

1 A gunman opened fire from a moving vehicle outside a Philadelphia shopping center on Wednesday, wounding five young men, one of them critically, police said. All five victims of the shooting, which was reported just after 2:30 p.m. EDT in the city's Germantown section, were transported to nearby Einstein Medical Center, Philadelphia police said in a statement. A 20-year-old man who was shot in the head was listed in critical condition at the hospital, police said. The other four victims, all men ranging in age from 19 to 23, were in stable condition with gunshot wounds to extremities. No suspects were immediately taken into custody and no weapons were recovered at the scene, police said, asking for tips from the public in helping solve the drive-by shooting. According to WPVI-TV in Philadelphia, multiple people were congregating by a wall outside of a Dollar General store. A white car drove up and someone opened fire from inside. "The occupants of a white Chevy Impala came through the parking lot, firing multiple rounds hitting all five males," said Philadelphia Police Commissioner Richard Ross.

MAN BUSTED IN UTAH OVER RICIN SENT TO DC

2 A man was arrested in Logan, Utah, on Wednesday in an investigation into envelopes filled with ricin, a poison, mailed to Pentagon officials and President Donald Trump, the Salt Lake Tribune reported. Local police did not identify the man, the newspaper said. A Federal Bureau of Investigation official in Salt Lake City referred Reuters to a statement sent to local media saying the FBI was investigating "potentially hazardous chemicals" in Logan, which is about 66 miles north of Salt Lake City. Officials are asking people to avoid the area, the FBI statement said, according to KSL-TV in Logan. "No wider threat to public safety exists at this time," KSL quoted the FBI as saying. The Pentagon said on Tuesday that it had received mail suspected of containing ricin, including an envelope that a U.S. official said was addressed to Defense Secretary Jim Mattis. The U.S. Secret Service said it was investigating a "suspicious envelope" addressed to Trump that was received on Monday, though it never entered the White House.

PRESIDENTIAL TEST ALERT SETS US PHONES BUZZING

4 Millions of U.S. cellphones buzzed and beeped on Wednesday during the first test of a presidential alert system that would warn the public of a national emergency, such as an imminent attack. The test message from the Federal Emergency Management Agency (FEMA) went out at 2:18 p.m. EDT and triggered a loud tone, a special vibration and a message reading: "THIS IS A TEST of the National Wireless Emergency Alert System. No action is needed." A separate alert on television and radios was issued at 2:20 p.m. EDT. Officials estimated Tuesday that upwards of 225 million U.S. mobile phones and other devices like smartwatches would receive the alerts broadcast by cell towers, or about 75 percent of all devices. Officials said they expected the alert would not reach all phones for a variety of reasons. Some people reported not getting the alerts or getting them on a delayed basis. U.S. cellphone users are not able to opt out of presidential alerts. The test alert was the most discussed topic on Twitter, in part because of President Donald Trump's propensity for sending tweets to his 55 million followers.

SC SHOOTING LEAVES 1 OFFICER DEAD, 4 INJURED

5 Five law enforcement officers were shot, one of them fatally, near the city of Florence, South Carolina, on Wednesday, before a suspect was arrested, according to local media and emergency management authorities. No official details on the shooting were immediately available. But the Florence County Emergency Management Department said on Twitter that an "active shooting situation" reported in the area was "over and the suspect is in custody." The tweet advised members of the public to keep away from the crime scene in the residential subdivision known as Vintage Place, on the western edge of Florence. A person answering the telephone at the county emergency department said he was not at liberty to provide further details. Florence-based WPDE-TV, citing the Florence County Sheriff's Office, reported that three sheriff's deputies and two Florence city police officers were shot in the incident, and that one of the city officers had died. WMBF-TV, an NBC News affiliate, also reported that one of the five officers had been killed. The condition of the four other officers was unknown, local media outlets said.

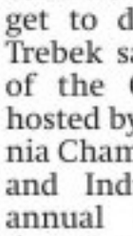
The most bizarre moments from Alex Trebek's stint as a debate monitor

The best part of the "Jeopardy" host's night may have been when it ended.



SAM NEWHOUSE
sam.newhouse@metro.us

With incumbent Democratic Gov. Tom Wolf comfortably outpacing GOP challenger state Sen. Scott Wagner in most polls, it looks like Wolf will easily take the race in November. For that reason, the Pennsylvania's race for governor has frankly not been very dramatic — that is, until Tuesday night, when "Jeopardy" legend Alex Trebek put on a bizarre spectacle at the gubernatorial debate.

Trebek, one of America's most iconic game show hosts, put on what many found to be a rambling and ludicrous performance as a "moderator" during the sole gubernatorial debate of the campaign.

"I accepted on the condition that I would get to do it my way," Trebek said at the start of the Oct. 1 debate, hosted by the Pennsylvania Chamber of Business and Industry at their annual dinner. "That doesn't mean a 'Jeopardy'-type quiz. I'm not here to embarrass the candidates. They're perfectly capable of doing that all by themselves," leading to awkward laughter, which became a theme of the night.

"I wanted to do it in a different way. I'm not a big fan of the traditional debate format where the candidates stand at the lectern, the moderator asks a question, and the candidate has 90 seconds to respond," Trebek said.

But apparently, a "different way" apparently meant a bizarre mockery of the process, with the debate barely scratching the surface of the candidates' contrasting political viewpoints.

During the 45-minute debate, Trebek spoke longer than either candidate; went on bizarre, rambling tangents; told lame jokes; and even cut off the candidates when they had the clear right to speak.

Wagner and Wolf both gamely tried to keep up appearances and participate like it was a normal debate, but over the course of Trebek's insane performance, both became increasingly visibly uncomfortable and discombobulated by Trebek's meandering questioning.

The low point of the night may have been when Trebek tried to make light of the recent Catholic sex abuse scandals in Pennsylvania brought to light by Attorney General Josh Shapiro, and compared them to the Penn State/Jerry Sandusky scandal.

It came up about 36 minutes into the debate, after Trebek had discussed problems with the state legislature, and only an unabridged transcript could possibly do it justice:

"Last time I looked, the approval rating for the legislature was 14 percent. The only thing with a lower rating in the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania is the Catholic church," Trebek began, to audible sounds of shock and objection from the audience. The candidates froze awkwardly as Trebek lumbered on.

That ending brought the debate some of the only applause of the night — but it was probably just because the audience was relieved Trebek's ramble had finally ended.

Making prevention a priority as we age

Illuminated Hearts

ASK ILLUMINATED HEARTS:

When it comes to our health, it's easier to prevent a problem than to treat one that's already in motion. Today we're talking about prevention; something that becomes increasingly more important as we age. Metro connected with Illuminated Hearts, a Philadelphia home-care provider, to unpack exactly what this means for seniors and caregivers.

Why is prevention so important for older folks?

Prevention is important because people who have healthy lifestyles are more likely to live longer, and with fewer disabilities or illnesses. The truth is that the elderly experience a ton of physical and physiological changes that often make it harder for them to heal after an illness. This, in turn, can impact their longevity.

When paired with a poor diet, lack of physical activity can contribute to high blood pressure, heart disease, heart attacks, poor health, and a lower quality of life. Emotionally, seniors also struggle with losing loved ones, their careers, and their independence. That's why it's important to acknowledge these changes and appreciate the value of a healthy lifestyle.

What are some good ways for seniors to stay healthy and active?

- Focus on prevention. Get regular physicals and make sure you have all doctor-recommended vaccinations. This includes keeping up with annual eye exams. Functioning vision plays a direct role in effectively managing your medications.
- Review medications regularly with your doctor and take them all as ordered. It's also wise to ask questions so that you understand all side effects and how your medications may affect your health and/or lifestyle.
- Stimulate your mind—reading, writing, playing games, and doing crossword puzzles are all activities that engage your mind and keep you interested in the world around you.
- Stay physically active. Regular exercise has been shown to boost energy, improve memory, and alleviate depression and anxiety.
- Maintain a healthy diet. The digestive system slows down with age, which is why it's important to eat high-fiber food. Seniors are also prone to dehydration, so drinking plenty of water is critical.
- Get sufficient sleep. Seven to nine hours per night should do the trick.
- Nurture your social life. Engaging in social activities can do wonders for our physical and mental health. Spend time with friends and family, and prioritize nourishing relationships.

How does Illuminated Hearts help clients optimize their health?

The journey begins with assessing your individual needs and working with you—as a team—to create a healthy lifestyle plan that works for you. We're here to help seniors and caregivers lead with prevention every step of the way. Illuminated Hearts is located at 2231 Bryn Mawr Avenue. Impact-driven orgs find mobile-app success with Philly startup MilkCrate

Getting your own app is within reach for social-impact organizations, thanks to Philly startup MilkCrate.

Back in 2014, tech whiz Morgan Berman was competing in a "Shark Tank-esque" competition at the Forbes 30 Under 30 summit in Philly to get more funding for MilkCrate, the app she created that connected users to sustainable businesses.

Four years later, things have changed a bit: Berman, the 33-year-old founder and CEO of Milkcrate, LLC, said her startup has "evolved" to a new, broader focus. Now she's using her app's platform as a customizable blank canvas for organizations looking to reach their audience through their very own smartphone app.

"It's been an evolution over time from when I first started the company five years ago," Berman told Metro. "We realized there's all these different organizations and companies out there that need an app to do all kinds of things, to reach all kinds of audiences. As long as an organization has a stated mission to make the world a better place in some tangible way, then we've been happy to work with them."

Berman compared her company to Wix, the customizable site builder that helps small companies and people create their own professional websites — but for mobile phone apps. The MilkCrate platform has customizable features based on what past clients have needed most to help build an audience, communicate with them and keep them engaged, such as event calendars, maps, push notifications, polls and games.

"We help you make a native app with your brand. You get to make it look and feel like your own, you control, manage and monitor it," Berman said. "Organizations are looking for ways to have engaging mobile activity and until now it's always been cost-prohibitive, way too expensive, and took way too much time. What we've done is kind of upend that. It's affordable and accessible and effective."

Over the past few years, MilkCrate has been establishing a reputation as it develops custom apps for companies and organizations that might not have been able to have them before.

"Organizations are looking for ways to have engaging mobile activity. What we've done is kind of upend that. It's affordable and accessible and effective."
Morgan Berman, founder and CEO of Milkcrate, LLC

On Sept. 19, Concilio, a Latino advocacy community organization, launched their brand-new mobile app for iOS and Android, built by MilkCrate, which provides a "centralized hub of resources for anyone involved or looking to get involved with Concilio."

From providing information about community events, to obtaining feedback on specific services and tracking the community's needs, it's a big step into the smartphone-driven present for the organization, founded in 1962.

"We are in the digital age. We carry these phones with us everywhere we go," Concilio specialist Melanie Nieves said in an announcement of the new app. "Concilio has created their first-ever app with the help of our friends at MilkCrate. They have helped us create a personal relationship with our community."

MilkCrate has even more projects designing custom apps for well-known Philly institutions in the works that aren't ready to go public, but their past work already includes some heavyweights: for UPenn's The Wharton School, they built a Green Tracker app to measure the student body's sustainability efforts.

"They actively engaged with helping us raise awareness of the app launch on campus as well as in tailoring the app to meet our needs," said David Mazzocco, associate director of Sustainability and Projects at The Wharton School. "We can tell they truly believe in their social mission and are receptive to our feedback in efforts to constantly improve their product."

MilkCrate also helped create an app for the Sustainable Business Network of Greater Philadelphia, as well as the STAMP by MilkCrate app for the Greater Philadelphia Cultural Alliance, an app that lets local teens visit 21 cultural institutions for free. Some apps are "game-ified," encouraging user engagement through games and competitions for points. Some of MilkCrate's clients have been outside the Philly region, like Bodhi Surf + Yoga, an eco-tourism organization based in Costa Rica.

"The Bodhi Surf + Yoga app by MilkCrate empowers our guests to continue their journey toward being better stewards of Mother Ocean," Travis Bays, owner of Bodhi, said. "We wanted to develop a loyalty program that wasn't traditional, and this tool allows us to create a mission-focused loyalty program that encourages people to be part of the solution."

As Berman put it, "Each one of our clients has been a whole story unto itself. They're all newsworthy — they're all doing something different with tech."

With major apps to debut in the near future, MilkCrate's reputation will be sure to keep growing. Not bad for a startup with just 10 employees working out of an office in the Hawthorne neighborhood of South Philadelphia.

Here's why social media depresses you, according to Kanye (and actual experts)

A recent study found that Instagram had the worst impact on teens' mental health, followed closely by Snapchat and Twitter. ISTOCK

Social-media moguls like Twitter's Jack Dorsey are taking seriously the detrimental impact social media has on people's mental health.

ANNA HARSTEDT
letters@metro.us

Would you be happier using social media if you no longer had to worry about getting any new followers? Or tons of likes and comments? Rapper Kanye West recently spoke out about the detrimental effect of social media on its users, and research backs up his concern with teens taking the brunt of the pressure.

Rates of anxiety, depression and other mental health issues among teens have risen 70 percent in the past 25 years, according to recent research by The Royal Society for Public Health in the U.K. According to those health experts, the constant use of social media by teens is one of the reasons for the struggle.

The study, called "#StatusOfMind," showed that Instagram, followed closely by Snapchat and Twitter, had the worst impact on teens' mental health.

"Social media is a filtered, curated portrayal of our peers' lives and a sharp contrast to actual life," Titania Jordan, chief parenting officer of Bark, told Metro. "Photos of your friends have been airbrushed to add tans, blur cellulite and remove stretch marks. This generation is feeling the brunt of 'the comparison trap' [the daily temptation to compare yourself with others] without being given the necessary perspective to see the entire picture."

Modern social-media culture has created a pressure cooker for teens in which the number of likes or followers they receive on their posts define their identities. Getting more likes and new followers lead to the feeling of appreciation and validation, causing teens to constantly seek more and more.

"Getting a like or a new follower stimulates the same part of your brain as sugar, sex or drugs," Jordan said. "Social media addiction is real, and these networks know it."

Is Kanye onto something?

The outspoken rapper and heavy social media user is calling for an end to this dark side of social media culture and claims to have been in contact with the heads of Instagram, Snapchat and Twitter to figure out ways to end the constant stress of chasing likes, comments and followers among teens.

"There are people who are committing suicide due to not getting enough likes. Seeking validation in the simulation," West shared recently, and ironically, on Twitter. "I personally want to participate in social media with the option of not having to show my followers of likes," West said.

West believes if social media platforms had the option of hiding the number of followers or likes, users would be better off.

"Having your amount of likes on display for the world to see and judge is like showing how much money you have in the bank," he said.

West shared the conversation that he had with Jack Dorsey, the CEO and one of the founders of Twitter, and with Ben Schwerin, Snapchat's head of partnerships. They both appeared to agree with West's criticism.

Dorsey reiterated West's concern, saying, "We've been thinking deeply about the follower and like counts, and what that incentivizes. We want to change. What made sense 12 years ago doesn't make sense today."

Studies have also shown that there are negative effects to taking selfies, especially when users apply "beautifying selfie apps" like Snapchat to edit their pictures.

"What we see with selfie culture is the editing and re-editing of identity." And that is a dangerous game to play," Dr. Linda Papadopoulos told Teen Vogue. Making matters worse is the emergence of so-called Snapchat dysmorphia, a psychological affliction that is similar to body dysmorphia. The disorder is brought on by the use of Snapchat filters that users believe improve physical appearance. Those who suffer from Snapchat dysmorphia are said to go so far as to seek plastic surgery to look more Insta-worthy.

So would quitting social media make you happier? While there is no definitive answer, signs seem to point to yes for Fanny Moell. The 19-year-old told Metro she feels down when her social media posts don't get as much interaction as she'd hoped.

"I often feel that I don't have enough followers or likes," said Moell, a student at Parsons School of Design and living in Brooklyn. "When I don't receive the amount of likes or comments that I wanted I immediately feel insecure and start to feel bad about myself. Sometimes I even delete the picture. There's a kind of status in having many likes or followers. It shows that people like you."

STATS

- 91% of 16 to 24-year-olds use the web for social networking.
- Social media can be more addictive than cigarettes and even alcohol.
- Rates of anxiety and depression in young people have risen 70% in 25 years.
- Social media use is linked with increased rates of anxiety, depression and poor sleep.
- 7 in 10 young people say they've endured cyberbullying.

"[Snapchat] was never about vanity metrics defining who they are, or their self-worth," Schwerin told West in a text, which the rapper later made public. "I think constantly comparing yourself to others' 'perfect' lives and feeling like you're in a perpetual popularity contest can be a very negative experience.

Senate moderates criticize Trump for mocking Brett Kavanaugh accuser

President Trump's reps said he was "stating the facts."

Three moderate Republicans who could be pivotal in determining whether the Senate confirms U.S. Supreme Court nominee Brett Kavanaugh criticized President Donald Trump on Wednesday for mocking a woman who has accused the judge of sexual assault.

Sens. Jeff Flake, Susan Collins and Lisa Murkowski were among the lawmakers who objected to Trump's comments regarding Christine Blasey Ford, a university professor from California who detailed her sexual assault allegation against Kavanaugh at an extraordinary Senate Judiciary Committee hearing last week.

The No. 2 Senate Republican, John Cornyn, said the FBI's report on sexual misconduct allegations against Kavanaugh could be given to senators as soon as Wednesday, amid concerns among Democrats about the thoroughness of the probe. The Senate's Republican leaders are planning a vote on Kavanaugh this week.

At a political rally in Mississippi on Tuesday night, Trump mocked Ford's testimony about the alleged assault in Maryland in 1982, when she was 15 and Kavanaugh was 17.

Ford testified that she could not remember the precise date or location of the alleged assault or how she got home afterward, but offered a detailed account of the incident in which she said a drunken Kavanaugh pinned her down, tried to remove her clothing and covered her mouth when she screamed.

"He sent a clear message to victims of sexual assault that they should not be believed."

"What neighborhood was it in? I don't know. Where's the house? I don't know. Upstairs, downstairs, where was it? I don't know. But I had one beer. That's the only thing I remember," Trump, who was himself accused during the 2016 presidential race of sexual misconduct with numerous women, said in his imitation of Ford's testimony.

"And a man's life is in tatters," Trump added.

Flake told NBC's "Today" show that "there's no time and no place for remarks like that, that discuss something this sensitive at a political rally.

"I wish he hadn't done it. I just say it's kind of appalling," Flake said.

Collins told reporters, "The president's comments were just plain wrong." She did not respond when asked if his comments would affect her vote on Kavanaugh's confirmation.

Asked whether Trump's comments would affect her vote, Murkowski told reporters, "I am taking everything into account. The president's comments yesterday mocking Dr. Ford were wholly inappropriate and, in my view, unacceptable."

Police called to Turkish cleric's US compound for suspected intruder

Police were called on Wednesday to the Pennsylvania compound of Fethullah Gulen, the U.S.-based Muslim cleric accused by Turkey of instigating a failed 2016 coup, after a guard saw a suspected armed intruder and fired a warning shot, a Gulen spokesman said.

The security guard fired the shot in the air as the person tried to enter the compound's gates at around 8:30 a.m. and the person fled, Alp Aslandogan, Gulen's media adviser, told Reuters. There are no known injuries or arrests, he said.

"Just one shot was fired," Aslandogan said. "The person disappeared. The incident is over as far as we're concerned."

Gulen was inside his residence on the compound at the time.

"His response was that the authorities should be informed and everybody should cooperate fully with the investigation to find out what happened," Aslandogan said.

President Tayyip Erdogan and the Turkish government accuse Gulen of orchestrating an attempted coup in 2016, in which rogue soldiers commandeered tanks and fighter jets, bombing parliament. More than 240 people were killed in the violence.

Gulen denies the accusations.

On Wednesday, several state police cars were seen around the sprawling gated compound and retreat in Saylorsburg in the Pocono Mountains, according to photographs shared online by local news reporters.

Police, who left the scene a short time later, did not respond to requests for comment. A local television station, WNEP, reported that police were still searching for the suspected intruder.

Gulen's compound is patrolled by a team of uniformed private security guards, some of them armed with handguns.

Heisman Trophy administrator sues website over use of name

The administrator of the Heisman Trophy, given annually to U.S. college football's most outstanding player, on Wednesday sued the operators of the Heisman Watch website and related social media accounts, alleging copyright and trademark infringement.

In a complaint filed in Manhattan federal court, the Heisman Trophy Trust accused the defendants of causing "irreparable harm" by confusing fans, and depriving it of its exclusive right to goodwill and other value associated with the Heisman name.

The lawsuit challenges the @heismanwatch account on Facebook, the @Heismanology1 feed on Twitter, and a Heisman Watch podcast available on the website and Apple's iTunes. It seeks unspecified triple damages and an injunction.

GETTY IMAGE

HeismanWatch.com contains a full-width disclaimer near the top of its homepage that says "Heisman Watch is in no way affiliated with the Heisman Trophy Trust."

The defendants include Chase Leavitt, Joseph Middleton and Kimball Dean Parker, all from Salt Lake City, court papers show.

They did not immediately respond to requests for comment. A lawyer for them could not be identified. Lawyers for the trust did not immediately respond to separate requests for comment.

HeismanWatch.com promises insight and analysis into the Heisman race, and a "calculator" that uses a regression model to assess statistical and voter data from past years to identify players who might win the current year's trophy.

Named for the Hall of Fame coach John Heisman, the Heisman Memorial Trophy was created by the Downtown Athletic Club in Manhattan in 1935.

The Heisman Trophy Trust, a charitable trust, has administered the trophy since 2006.

This year's trophy is scheduled to be awarded on Dec. 8.

The case is Heisman Trophy Trust v. Leavitt et al, U.S. District Court, Southern District of New York, No. 18-09051.

We are so self-absorbed that everything must be about me... me...me...me. If you feel annoyed to say "you're welcome" because someone says "Thank you" because you did a good deed, something is wrong with you. If you think people feel ashamed into saying "thank you," something is wrong with you. We have got to stop being so self-absorbed and remember to think of others and their feelings. Aries Don't let anger take charge when positive change is what's needed. Refuse to let anyone play mind games with you. Protect your interests with a smile on your face.

Taurus Take a break from people you deal with daily. It will give you a chance to rethink what's best for you and how you should go about making it happen.

Gemini Get out and network with people you admire to find encouragement and inspiration. Getting ahead depends on how and what you do.

Cancer A steady pace will lead to victory. Settling a matter that has been causing you grief will ease your stress and give you the courage to move forward.

Leo Keep your life simple and do your best not to overreact. Too much of anything will lead to trouble. Don't make waves, or let aggressive behavior dominate.

Virgo Personal improvements will pay off. Getting along with peers, friends and family will get you the help you need to accomplish your goals. Be smart and you'll gain favors and stability.

Libra Keep your emotions in check to avoid missing out on something you should be doing. Distress will lead to immobility. An open mind will help you avoid a stalemate.

Scorpio Choose to take the high road, regardless of what someone else does. Anger will only magnify a situation you are trying to defuse.

Sagittarius You'll make headway if you stick to the script and follow through with your plan. Your enthusiasm will outshine anyone trying to compete with you.

Capricorn Being a good listener will help you win the confidence and help of new allies. Understanding what's behind others' actions will give you the edge.

Aquarius Focus on saving, not on spending. You don't have to keep up with someone or follow that person's lead, especially if he or she is a bad influence.

Pisces Something good is heading your way. Make sure you have all your paperwork in order and are prepared for what's coming down the pipeline. Readiness will make a difference. EUGENIA LAST

"The Man in the High Castle" returns to Amazon for season 3 on Friday. GETTY IMAGES

Rufus Sewell insists 'The Man in the High Castle' season 3 stays true to Philip K. Dick

The man behind the series' villainous Nazi officer talks about the show's deeper forays into the sci-fi genre.

ANDREW HUSBAND

In many ways, Amazon's "The Man in the High Castle" series is as much a work of science fiction as it is a period piece. After all, it's an alternative history that imagines a world in which Nazi Germany and the Empire of Japan won World War II.

Yet for the majority of its first season, "High Castle" stuck to author Philip K. Dick's novel and largely avoided the more mind-bending aspects of parallel dimensions, the multiverse and other similarly speculative concepts. Season 2 delved somewhat deeper but remained as close as it possibly could to the grounded reality beneath its characters' feet.

Season 3, which premieres Friday, largely abandons these restraints and goes all in. The Nazis have discovered the multiverse, as well as the "travelers," or individuals who are capable of moving from one parallel dimension to another. Their scientists are attempting to find a way to travel beyond their universe in order to conquer other worlds.

"I don't really worry so much about the genre unless it affects the quality of the writing," says Rufus Sewell, who plays the villainous John Smith, a former American-turned-Nazi commander. "One of the things that can happen is that when people start writing according to a genre, the writing can fall toward the nearest accepted tropes of that genre. It becomes very generalized, less organic, and less interesting to me as an actor."

However, the British actor notes, such has not been the case for "High Castle."

"That's not the case when it's very good writing, or when it's top-quality writing," he explains. "One of the advantages of having Isa Dick Hackett, who's Philip K. Dick's daughter, as one of our producers is that we have access and permission to delve into his extended explorations of the themes that he revisited over and over again after the book's publication.

"He made many attempts to write sequels or short stories based on these explorations. This is where the science-fiction elements that we are eking out here in the third season were first explored by Dick himself. These elements were always there."

There was one aspect of the "High Castle" multiverse, though, that Sewell wasn't too keen on, especially as an actor.

"Even though I'm jealous of other actors getting to play all different versions of themselves," he says, "I was very grateful for the opportunity to not do that. I wanted to embed myself as deeply as possible into the character that I was already playing, before there was any sort of departing from it. That's the best way to establish an emotional arc and a through line that the audience can latch onto and understand."

Kathy Griffin is on a comedy mission

She hits the stage at the Merriam Theatre in Philly on Oct. 6.

A.D. AMOROSI

Talking with comedian Kathy Griffin for an assigned 10 minutes-that-turned-into-50 was a soliloquy of rapid-fire sarcasm, spite, silliness, statements of hard fact and wishful thinking.

That all this and more will be part of her two Merriam Theatre shows next weekend, Oct. 6, is to be expected. Mainly because Griffin has a quick, sharp mind that assimilates the emotional, social and political events of the moment, and spits them back at you immediately.

"My whole life was turned over, so you haven't seen a show like this ever before," say Griffin, talking about the May 2017 photo shoot with her holding a bloody, severed, faux Trump head, and having her career caved in by public officials, network heads and right-wing audience members.

While the comedian agrees that she been in trouble before, she yells out, "Not like this, honey!" before going through a litany of stupidity done in the name of censoring Griffin and suspending her career.

"What's funny, or not so funny, is that after the Trump experience, I've learned that there is 'Hollywood trouble' and 'real-life trouble.' I mean, I took the picture in the first place because this f––g pig has it coming, and have been through Hollywood trouble with religious groups and such, and that led to my naiveté about what could happen," says Griffin. "I knew the picture would be shocking. It was artsy-fartsy and thought it would wind up in Der Spiegel — but did not believe that it would go outside the bounds of my own social media."

Griffin didn't believe that TMZ's Harvey Levin would pick up the photo and run with it. Or that Donald Trump Jr. would Tweet out his disgust over the photo. It did, and they did, big time. Griffin was ostracized and lost guest starring and hosting duties on CNN, American tour dates and the ability to be seen or hired for television or Netflix/Amazon specials.

"Remember how many stand-up specials I had? I'm in the Guinness Book of Records for how many," she says. "I didn't know the extent of how American Media could plant hit pieces on me and my girlfriend Stormy Daniels. … To have the sitting president use the power of the first family, the Department of Justice, the Oval Office, the right-wing media and the entertainment media set out to decimate an American citizen is historic."

And Griffin believes that she was the test case, as the same government and media attempted to put down stand-up comedian Michelle Wolf (after her White House Correspondents event comments) and talk show host Samantha Bee (for calling Ivanka Trump a "feckless c–").

Mention guys in Hollywood comedy who have been in trouble for their indiscretions, and how easy it may be for them to make a comeback (i.e.

Griffin comes to Philly this weekend.
PHOTO PROVIDED

Louis C.K.), and Griffin says she's heard through the industry grapevine that there is a "whisper campaign among the men to watch each other's backs…. Hey, I'm not going to have Louie's back. Alec Baldwin called me while I was in the middle of a federal investigation to ask if I'd phone Louie — that he's having a hard time — and I said, 'Bye, Alec.' I'm busy being on the 'no-fly' list. Interpol is looking at me too, I'm not going to take my penis out, run it on my intern and ruin their dreams."

Griffin is on a comedy mission, as she has finally figured it is a different world for female comedians than it is for male.

"I always had the Westboro Baptist Church people at my shows because of my support of the gays, but now I have old women who pull themselves away from me because they think I'm in ISIS," Griffin says, laughing. "Look, I'm a worker bee who just wants to get gigs. I write all my own stuff. I love making people laugh, whether it's on commercials or doing stand-up. I love making fun of the Real Housewives and all that, but to be able to have traveled the world as I did [when she couldn't get shows in America in the wake of Trump] on the back of that photo — it has changed my life irrevocably. It was a complete game-changer. I'm the Hanoi Jane of comedy — the seventh-most Googled person of 2017 for all the wrong reasons.

"And by the way, when I'm in Philly, I will call my friend Stormy from the stage to ask her about the mushroom-shaped penis," she adds. "I'm not doing some family-friendly show here. It's all fair game, honey. What else can they do to me?"

Old City Fest is full of fun and unique entertainment. PHOTOS: KYLE OBER AND ERIC GEOFFREY

A party celebrating the present located in the past

Old City Fest is back this Sunday, Oct. 7, and this year is better than ever.

MOLLY GIVEN
Molly.Given@metro.us

This Sunday, Oct. 7, Old City Fest is back and ready to have everyone come out and enjoy all of the free family fun that the festival has to offer.

The website states: "Old City Fest is a celebration of art and design, fashion and food, creativity and culture on the streets of America's most historic square mile— Old City, Philadelphia. This event highlights the region's premier art and design district, showcasing local designers, creative firms, restaurants, retailers, galleries, theater, culture, history and architecture."

There is a lot to look forward to including plenty of tasty treats. Local eateries including Amada, Barry's Buns, Buddakan, The Franklin Fountain, Lucha Cartel, Old City Coffee and plenty more will be offering up some delicious bites.

Get ready to shop while at the festival as well. Find the city's latest fashions, gifts and home decor including Handcrafted porcelain jewelry made from vintage pieces of china, new jewelry made from repurposed vintage papers and findings, Philly-themed pillows for the home, hand-poured soy candles and soaps in fun fragrances and so much more.

Plenty of Old City shops will be on hand, including Benjamin Lovell Shoes, Margot Camille Optique, Pinot Boutique and more. Additional vendors from outside Philadelphia will also be there.

Style is also a focal point this year. A fashion show will take place right under the foliage of fall featuring one-of-a-kind looks from local boutiques. If you like the what you see, you're in luck: There will be a marketplace next to the runway so you can buy the looks you love instantly. The fashion shows will take place at 1:45 p.m. and 3:45 p.m.

There will be an impressive lineup of live music throughout the day as well. Everyone can enjoy the sounds of Chill Moody, West Philadelphia Orchestra,Worldtown Soundsystem and DJ D-ill.

There will also be live showings from local artists including dancing, clowns, live showcases and more.

Make sure to stop by the family fun zone. Experience performances that will make you feel like you are at the front row of a circus, check out a history of colonial chocolate at the Betsy Ross House, and be entertained by a magician. New this year is the Give & Take Jugglers show: The Little Circus, a self-contained 45-minute show featuring aerial fabric, trapeze and more.

10 Things to get you set for the Flyers' 2018-19 season

Philly begins its 2018-19 conquest on the road against the defending Western Conference champion Vegas Golden Knights.

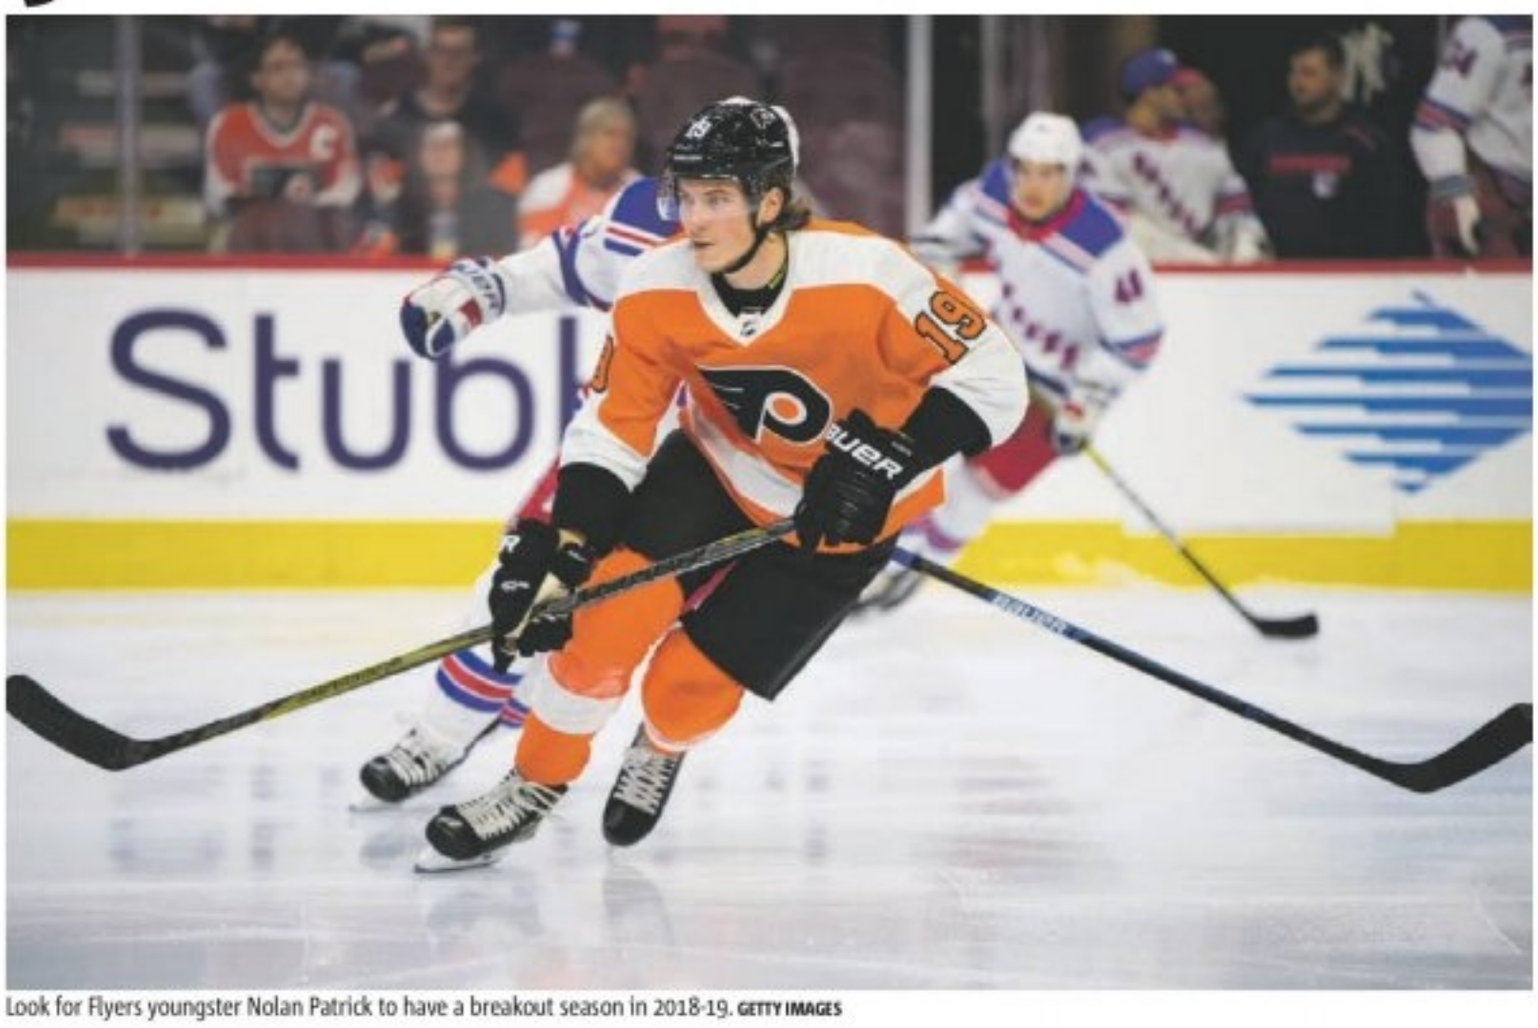
sports@metro.us



Look for Flyers youngster Nolan Patrick to have a breakout season in 2018-19. GETTY IMAGES

The Philadelphia Flyers finished last season with 98 points, in third place in the Metropolitan Division, and lost to the Pittsburgh Penguins in the first round of the Stanley Cup Playoffs. Following an offseason that consisted of adding an offensive weapon and buoyed by a strong returning cast, they are primed for an entertaining campaign in 2018-19.

As the regular season kicks off on Thursday in Las Vegas against the defending Western Conference champion Golden Knights, here are 10 burning questions, story lines, trends to watch, and predictions.

1. WHO'S NEW?

Forward James van Riemsdyk, defenseman Christian Folin and goalie Calvin Pickard.

2. WHO'S GONE?

Forwards Valtteri Filppula and Matt Read, defenseman Brandon Manning and goalie Petr Mrazek.

3. TEAM STRENGTH

The Flyers were 12th in the league last year with 247 goals. With the addition of van Riemsdyk (36 goals last season) via free agency coupled with the anticipated increase in production from young players, the Flyers should have no problem putting the puck in the net.

4. TEAM WEAKNESS

It is easy to go with goaltending, given the team's unstable situation, but the greater concern lies with the penalty kill. The Flyers ranked 29th out of 31 teams last year in this category and did nothing in the offseason to address the unit.

5. SO, WHAT IS THE BIG DEAL WITH GOALTENDING?

Well, it's not ideal. Injuries have left the position in a state of uncertainty. Starter Brian Elliott, working back from hip surgery in the spring, looks close to 100 percent. As to who will serve as his backup, it's anyone's guess. Look for Alex Lyon to lock up the job once he returns from an injury at the end of the month.

6. PLAYER MOST LIKELY TO HAVE BREAKOUT YEAR

Last year it was Sean Couturier who set career highs in goals (31), assists (45) and plus/minus (34). This year, all eyes are on Nolan Patrick. The 2017 second overall pick had 13 goals and 17 assists last year, but he had an impressive 21 points in the final 33 games.

Patrick, who will play center with Jakub Voracek and van Riemsdyk on the second line, should pick up where he left off and crack 20 goals and 30 assists.

7. PLAYER MOST LIKELY TO TAKE A STEP BACK

Claude Giroux finished second in the league in scoring last year with a career-high 102 points. Don't expect a repeat performance. However, he should still provide a point per game and top out in the mid-80 range.

8. WHAT YOU SHOULD BE EXCITED ABOUT

Sit back and enjoy watching the bevy of young players develop. Thanks to shrewd scouting, the Flyers have some of the most exciting players aged 25 or under in the NHL, which includes Ivan Provorov, Travis Sanheim, Robert Hagg, Travis Konecny, Oscar Lindblom, Mikhail Vorobyov and Patrick.

9. WILL FANS WARM TO GRITTY?

Ah, the burning question about the team's new mascot. He looks like a freakish monster, but he's Philly's freakish monster. The faithful will slowly defend him and come around to love the googly-eyed orange beast.

10. WILL THEY PRINT PLAYOFF TICKETS?

The Flyers have the firepower up front, an improving back line, and a good mix of veterans and young players. As long as Elliott holds up in net or someone else comes to the rescue (Carter Hart?) should he fail, the Flyers will qualify for the postseason and win a round.

Viagra's Sex Pill Monopoly Is Over

Since 1993, three brands have dominated the men's sexual performance market. Now there's a fourth, Vesele. And the difference is amazing...

Expiring Patent Opens the Door to a New Sex Pill: Vesele is a new pill that cost just $1 a dose and does not require a prescription. It works on both body and mind to increase arousal and erection hardness.

SAN DIEGO – A new sex pill is set to take the spotlight with the Viagra patent about to expire. Since it's not a drug, it's something very different, it won't require a perscription and is priced just under a $1 a dose.

The new pill called Vesele is part of a new class of performance enhancers for men, which work on the body and mind, supporting firmer and harder erections

Formulated with a special compound known as a blood flow boosters, Vesele can transport its active ingredients in higher levels into the blood stream, where it begins to work.

The patent pending ingredient increases nitric oxide production, initiating a process known as vasodilation, which causes arteries and vessels throughout the body to relax. This allows blood to flow to penis and genitals, promoting stronger, harder erection which last longer.

But what makes Vesele so remarkable, and what these other sex pills can't do, is that a small portion of this blood flows to the brain, which creates feelings of intense arousal. In laymen's terms, users become incredibly excited and turned on.

This is why the makers of Vesele say their pill has worked so effectively in human clinical use survey trial. It increases blood flow to the two most important organs for great sex, the penis and the brain.

The Brain Erection Connection

Until now, medical researchers did not fully understand the brain-erection connection. It has now been made clearer with the data backing Vesele. When both are supplied with a constant blood flow, men are harder and firmer for longer...and have higher sex drives.

"Most of the research and treatment methods for men's sexual failures have focused on physiological factors and have neglected the emotional ones. For the leading sex drugs to work, like Cialis and Viagra, you need visual stimulation" explains Dr. Henry Esber, from the company who created Vesele.

According to research published by the National Institute of Health, 50% of men taking these drugs stop responding or can't tolerate their side effects...and on top of that they spend $25 per pill and it doesn't even work half the time.

This is what makes Vesele so different. It provides the blood stream with nitric oxide which cause arteries to relax. The patented accelerator speeds up this process even more.

The result is an increase in hardness and maintenance and frequent sex when it is taken daily.

Great Sex At Any Age

With the conclusion of latest human clinical use survey trial, Vesele is now being offering in the US. And regardless of the market, its sales are exploding.

Men across the country are eager to get their hands on the new pill and according to the research, they should be.

In the trial above, men taking Vesele saw a staggering 45.1% improvement in erection hardness from baseline over a four-month period. Their erections also lasted twice as long.

These same men also experienced an astounding 27% increase in the desire for sex (libido/sex drive) and an even greater improvement in overall satisfaction and ability to satisfy their partners.

Higher Absorption into the Blood Stream

Vesele is made up of three specialized ingredients: two vasodilators and a patented absorption enhancer often called an accelerator. The FDA considers all to be safe.

Research shows that with age, many men struggle to produce an erection firm enough for penetration.

And although there are many theories as to why this happens (including a loss in testosterone) one thing is certain, inadequate blood flow is virtually always to blame. That's why sex drug manufacturers focus on blood flow, it makes your erection hard.

But what's more surprising, and what these manufacturers have failed to consider, is that lack of blood flow can also kill your sex drive. That's because blood supplies energy for the brain. This energy is required for creating brainwaves that cause excitability and arousal.

Studies show that nitric oxide stimulates the entire cardiovascular system, including the arteries that lead to both the brain and penis. The higher concentration of the ingredients in Vesele combined with the accelerator ensures that this process continues to work over time.

The sexual benefits of Vesele will start to show as its ingredients build up in the system over time. This is why many men take it every single day.

The Same Study Shows Positive Effects on Women

In the same outstanding study referenced throughout, Vesele was also shown to have a surprising effect on women too. That's because the same arteries and vessels that carry blood and oxygen to the brain and genitals are the same in men and women.

"In our study, women taking Vesele saw a stunning 23.7% and 20.4% improvement in arousal and sex drive over baseline.

You can imagine why some couples are taking Vesele together. Everything feels better. Everything works better. Everyone performs better.

A New Frontier of Non-Prescription Sex Pills

With daily use, Vesele is helping men (and women) with their sex lives and overcome sexual lets downs without side effect or expense.

Through a patented accelerate, Vesele's formula is better absorbed into the bloodstream, resulting in remarkable improvements in erection firmness and hardness.

And with better blood flow, users also experienced sexual feeling they haven't felt in years.

Where to Find Vesele

This is the official release of Vesele in Pennsylvania. As such, the company is offering a special discounted supply to any reader who calls within the next 48 hours.

A special hotline number and discounted pricing has been created for all Pennsylvania residents. Discounts will be available starting today at 6:00AM and will automatically be applied to all callers.

Your Toll-Free Hotline number is 1-800-450-5124 and will only be open for the next 48 hours. Only a limited discounted supply of Vesele is currently available in your region.
